DOMESTIC ECONOMY

CLEANING THE HOUSE AND KEEPING IT CLEAN.

How to Get Rid of the Pestiferous Germs that Breed Disease—Why Women Wear Out So Fast—Ill Health and Ill Temper.

We don't clean house now because we are "finicky," but because we want to be rid of deadly bacteria, says a writer in the Ohio Farmer. Even the old time annual house cleaning is not sufficient nowadays, for as a sanitary measure we must chase pestiferous germs in the autumn as well as in the spring. The soil that proves most congenial for their culture is being manufactured day and night, and is made up of the fluff that constantly accumulates in cracks and out of the way corners from clothing, carpets, bedding, the minute scabs of epidemics constantly thrown off by the skin, as well as from soot and ashes and the impalpable dust sitting in from doors and windows. The invisible cloud envelops us constantly, irritating throat and lungs, but becomes dangerous only when left undisturbed to foster by moisture its broods of disease.

The modern housekeeper goes about the task quietly and methodically, choosing a convenient day when nobody will be greatly disturbed and cleans and settles one room before attacking another. I do not think it is important just what plan is carried out, providing the rooms are made scientifically clean. Given general principles, each housekeeper must adapt them to her particular needs and environment. Personally, I like to attack the attic first, because it is ready to store any articles not needed for the season, as fast as one comes to them in other parts of the house. That done, I go through the house taking down draperies, etc., that must go through the laundry, and have them all washed to gether and put away to wait their turn to be hung after the rooms are ready for them.

Choosing a bright day, when the heavy work of the week is over, I determine upon the room to be cleaned, and begin operations early in the morning. If it be a bedroom, remove the bedding out of doors, shaking and beating out the dust thoroughly, then leave it where wind and sun and air will have full sway for hours. Next clear out closets and drawers, shaking and dusting clothing and hanging it also out of doors, looking carefully for traces of moths and taking note of garments whether they are to be discarded, laid away, mended, or made over. Next take down the pictures, dust and clean thoroughly, and put aside in another room, and also one by one each article of furniture. Have the carpet removed and hung on a line in the yard, if possible in a good current of air, and beaten and brushed thoroughly at intervals of an hour or so till all dust possible is removed, then leave it to sun and air till nightfall. The room being empty, sweep down cobwebs from ceiling and walls, and with a clean whisk broom and duster go over all the door and window casings, mouldings, and base boards, carefully cleaning out every crevice, then with long, light strokes, sweep the floor. Turn every bit of dust and dirt immediately. When the dust has settled, cover your broom with cotton tannin or flannel-ette and carefully wipe ceiling and walls.

Add a tablespoonful of ammonia to half a gallon of hot water and wash windows and wood work without soap. If you see traces of wood lice or other vermin, give them a dose of strong hot lime applied with small brush or swab to the crevice so as not to injure paint or paper. With a wooden skewer or the dull point of a wire nail clear out the dust from the corners of window sashes, etc. Lastly scald and wipe the floor, and with windows wide open leave it for an hour or two to dry. Now, if you are well while the floor is drying, you will lie down and rest. Relax your mind as well as your body—think of something pleasant. Take note of your body, and if you find any part of it tense, holding on—let go. The reason women wear out so fast is because they drive themselves beyond the limit, and instead of resting a few minutes as soon as they perceive symptoms of fatigue, they drive themselves to finish the job before they quit, with the result, in time, of ill health and ill temper.

When the floor is dry, lay the carpet and put the furniture and pictures in place; then after tightly closing doors and windows, ignite a pound of sulphur and leave it to burn for a half hour or so, being careful to tightly cork the cracks around the door to prevent the escape of the fumes into other parts of the house. The nearest thing for the purpose is a sulphur candle, costs 10 or 15 cents, but if you cannot get one, burn sulphur in an old basin placed in a larger one half filled with water. Afterwards air the room ten or twelve hours before it is occupied. Add to a pint of sweet oil, one-third pint of household ammonia shake well together till the mixture looks like cream. Wet a piece of soft, old flannel in a portion of it, and rub the polished surfaces of the furniture. This will remove every stain and streak of dirt and leave the furniture looking like new. It is especially nice for oak furniture, and may be kept for months in a well corked bottle.

In this way, without hurry, without worry, clean each room successively. If you are unfortunate enough to have a large house, plan to take up part of your carpets in the fall, and the rest in the spring. Autumn is the best season for painting and papering, as there are no little flies to annoy, and the paint will look fresh longer and wear better if put on in cool weather.

The cellar needs most careful attention of all, because it is so easy to overlook dirt in its dim light. Allow no refuse to accumulate there; be especially careful to promptly remove decaying vegetables. Sweep, dust, and clean carefully, and after the sulphur bath give the walls a good coat of white-wash. You will be well repaid for all the trouble by the sweet wholesome-ness of the place and the superior way in which fruits and vegetables keep their perfection in it.

Women has a fear for every human sorrow and bushels of them for her own.

SAMOAN GIRLS.

They Are Athletes and Born Coquette.

The Samoan girl is not only an athlete, she is a born coquette. From the time she is ten years old, she begins to make eyes from behind a beautifully carved fan. She is without sincerity, but romantic to the extreme. Yet in spite of her romantic nature the Samoan girl when angered is a match for a Samoan warrior in activity and strength. It has been said that the Samoan women and girls are even harder to deal with than the men. They are absolutely without feeling, and are cruel to their captives.

If a Samoan is fortunate she will wear a necklace of shark's teeth and earrings made of some metal. That is her costume. The shark's teeth are usually the present of the favored suitor, and it often is the case that a girl hardly in her teens will have many necklaces. The more shark's teeth a girl possesses the more admirers she has, and, therefore, the more is envied by her less fortunate sisters. The Samoans are a great people for dancing, and during holiday season dancing is in order day and night. The girls take to dancing as naturally as they do to swimming, and a girl is taught to swim before she is taught to walk. They are graceful, and readily learn any dance.

The Samoan girl has no choice of husbands. The marriage is always arranged by her parents, and she accepts the inevitable. However, marriage does not prevent a woman from having admirers.—Woman's Life.

That Unlucky 13.

"How do you think I have been absorbing atmosphere lately?" asked the girl. "No, I am in earnest. Of course I don't mean riding in the open cars. Don't you know you always hear artists talking about atmosphere? They have to have it. They go abroad, not so much to study as to get atmosphere, and I thought perhaps it might be a good thing to apply that principle and get a little for the different things I am doing. I first commenced to do my hair up on the leaves of a German calendar, but it occurred to me after I had begun that it was a practical way of getting this atmosphere, and I am not sure but I did get along a bit better with my German. But I finally came to grief, and you would never guess how. No, not with my German, but with my hair. One day I was particularly anxious to have my hair look well, but in the morning when I took out one of my curl papers the lock of hair that was around it was perfectly straight. I couldn't see how it was, because I had done my hair up all alike and this was the only one that went wrong. Now, I never was superstitious, though of course I wouldn't do anything when there was a very bad omen. But what do you think? The piece of the calendar the straight lock was on was for the thirteenth day of the month, and there was a big figure 13 on it. I wouldn't have believed it if it hadn't happened to me, but it just goes to show that thirteen is an unlucky number. Only one lock of hair straight."

Ladies' Pelerine.

Fur collar and pelerine, have taken the place of capes in feminine fancy this season. Combinations in furs are extremely fashionable, many beautiful and striking effects being produced with blue fox and stone martin, Persian lamb or seal, with white, black or grey fox, sable, chinchilla and ermine. In this lovely pelerine, Alaska sable is used to trim rich seal. The adjustment is made by shoulder seams and a centre back seam may also be used, if so desired. The back is shaped in a shallow point. The front is broad at the shoulders, fits stylishly over the bust and ends in a decided point a trifle below the waist line.

The sable is applied around the back and on the shoulders at a considerable depth, but narrows toward the lower edge, where it ends in two beautiful tails. The high flaring collar is fashionably shaped, fastening close at the neck to give the desired protection. It is faced with sable. Charming effects can be produced by the same model in less expensive material. Persian lamb cloth may be trimmed with inexpensive fur or velvet can be used for the body of the pelerine with astrakhan for the trimming. To make this pelerine in the medium size will require 1/2 of a yard of velvet 27 inches wide with 1 yard of contrasting material the same width.

New Opera Bags.

One of the latest uses for the animal head in fur is for an opera bag, a silk or satin pouch being attached and the head forming the lower part of the bag. If one is very vulgar and very rich she may have diamond eyes in her animal's head; if one is vulgar and poor she may have rhinestones, which loses nothing of its conspicuousness, says the Criticism. These bags form a rather quaint addition to the winter toilet, and, matching the fur trimmings or article of attire, give a pleasing note of individuality to the ante costume. A gray fox's head with eyes in attachment, out of which peered a pair of opera glasses in response silver, was seen at the theatre the other evening, the last touch to an effective toilet in the prevailing shade of gray.

A WOMAN OF FASHION

WHAT SHE OFTEN SPENDS FOR APPAREL.

Things Seen in the Big Stores of New York—Articles for Use and for Ornament—A Handsome and Tasteful Costume.

(New York Letter.)

Blanche Walsh, the actress, was recently reported as saying in defence of the fur dealer, Mrs. O'Neill, that $50,000 a year is not too much for a woman of fashion to spend for her apparel. It would seem that there are many women in New York who enjoy a like allowance, judging by the way purchases are made in the big department stores. It is not strange that the stylishly gowned model looks at you scornfully when you ask her for a modest coat for $20 that must last you two seasons, where she has just sauntered upon a carriage customer who has bought a simply stitched cloth coat for $125. That coat is simple enough to suit your humble needs, but the price falling upon unaccustomed ears seems tremendous, even for the "latest." In silks, clothes, trimmings, the same extravagance is visible this season.

It is a pleasure for the artistic woman to merely wander through the aisles of the shops and feast her eyes on the glorious color schemes. For instance, one well known store had an immense window artistically arranged with gray for the motif. Only a window dresser worthy of the large salary paid him could arrange such a multitude of small articles in such a harmonious picture. There were pocketbooks, card cases, picture frames, every imaginable Jesk appointment, made of the softest shade of gray leather, monkey-skin and leather. There were lovely chatelaine bags of gray suede, the tops heavily beaded with cut steel, and clasps of silver with the dull finish at the moment so fashionable.

Quite by itself was a tray of articles made of gun metal. A watch made of this material is very chic when fastened on the lapel of a tailor-made gown of dark gray Oxford. Apropos of gun metal, there are shown so many pretty articles suitable for men, which later will serve as Christmas gifts. There are match boxes, set with diamonds and rubies, pencil and pen holders, card cases, etc.

The stores are displaying Christmas novelties but at present the majority of buyers are completing their winter wardrobe.

Since box and automobile coats have been approved by leaders of fashion, we must follow like sheep. They will not become very common at present for the prices are kept way up. The long coats are very becoming to some women. I saw a shining black cloth Newmarket in a Broadway car the other day. It was perfectly plain, with strapped seams and fitted the plump wearer to perfection. But alas! When she rose to leave the car, a bit of dragged white chiffon on the trailing skirt destroyed the effect and proved to me, at least, that long coats are incompatible with trailing street gowns, having the clinging folds close about the wearer's heels.

It would seem that the craze for steel beads and sprangles will soon show some signs of abatement when some of the cheaper grade stores are selling sprangled belts and collars for 69 cents each. At the same time they are very pretty with a plain gray or black frock.

I saw a woman on Fifth avenue the other day whose costume would have delighted Edmund Russell and the other aesthetic critics. It was a symphony in brown, for she carried out in her costume her own coloring. Her hair was fair, her eyes reddish brown and her skin dazzlingly white. The dress was a soft shade of brown cloth. The sleeves and vest were of a taffeta of exactly the same shade and were elaborately stitched. The revers were of navy biscuit colored lace over brown taffeta and were edged with mink. Her toque was a little beauty. The soft round crown was stitched with white silk in concentric lines. A single stitch caught it in the center. Around the rim were braids that seemed to show every conceivable shade of brown manifest in the costume. In front were a few velvet loops lined with white taffeta. A muff and scarf of mink completed this really tasteful costume, so all right to the eye after seeing huge bunches of purple violets on national color combinations.

Stitching, fur and lace still are in the lead as the fashionable garnitures, and scallops appear in every conceivable place. A beautiful chinchilla cape is made with three rows of scallops, giving the appearance of a triple cape. It seems a pity to make up this lovely fur in such a fashion but the prevalent idea in New York, now and always, is for something new, no matter how incongruous or grotesque the combination may be. We have not as yet come to the point of wearing stuffed mice, but I presume, if they were as scarce as Russian sable, we should be envying the happy possessors of them.

A pretty fancy vest is made of white chiffon, strapped across with narrow black velvet, a tiny steel buckle on every strap. Small steel buttons serve a like purpose.

Fashions change in jewelry as in all else and while one authority claims that only the engagement ring should go on with the wedding ring, while the other rings should go on the little finger, there is another who says marriage rings are most fashionable and should be worn on the ring finger. The marriage is losing its prestige because of its easy imitation, but the happy maid who is wealthy enough to have a mink chain set alternately with emeralds, rubies and diamonds, has the quiet satisfaction of knowing that her treasure is above criticism.

Cleaning Sapeucans.

Clean up as you go. Put sauding vat in each saucupan or stewpan as you wash up. Dry your saucupans before you put them on the shelf. Never scrub the inside of a frying pan; rub it with wet silver sand and rinse it out afterward with hot water. Clean your tin of soap and whitening, mixed, but rub it with hot water when dry, rub it with flannel when dry and with chamomile and dry whitening.

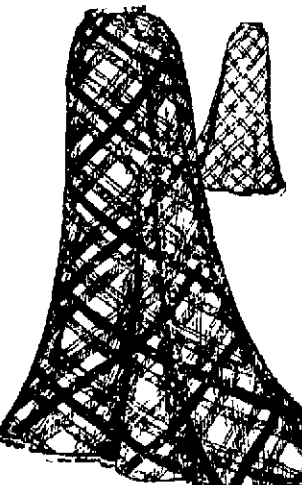

AN AMERICAN GIRL.

She Defied Regulations of Queen Victoria's Court, But Gained Admission.

A delightful little story has only lately come to light of how a pretty and audacious San Francisco girl once defied the regulations of Queen Victoria's court. Along in the seventies bonnie Nellie Chapman, daughter of William S. Chapman, the well-known mine owner, says the San Francisco Chronicle, found herself on the eve of her presentation to England's Queen. Now there are certain rules of high etiquette laid down for these occasions. Among the rest royalty prescribes the exact length of a train and the degree of exposure required of the arms and bust. But Nellie Chapman had ideas of her own on the latter subject, and when it came to the shaping of the gown she was to wear for the grand event the American girl had the height of her corsage arranged to suit her own ideas of what was decorous and appropriate. It was an extremely dainty gown of white satin, perfectly fitted to the slight and graceful figure, with chaste trimmings of tulle and garlands of white marguerites, diamonds and pearls giving it a touch of elegance, and above it all the fair republican face carried with truly regal spirit. But, alas! on the threshold of the drawing-room she was stopped by an imperious chamberlain, who loftily informed her that she could not go in, as her gown was not low enough in the neck. For one moment the spirited American girl was dismayed, then, with a scornful look at the courtier, she lifted her little gloved hands, and, eluding both shoulders of the corsage an impetuous twirl, bared her dimpled shoulders, and with the defiant, "Now it will do," walked past the astonished gentleman-in-waiting. She afterward had her picture taken in the court dress which so nearly brought her to social grief.

Ladies' Circular Skirt.

It is generally understood that plaids, especially the large plaids that are worn this season, show off to better advantage when made up on the bias in a circular skirt. The illustration gives a model skirt designed principally for plaid materials. It is of circular shaping, fits perfectly smooth across the front and over the hips to the centre back. The upper part is sheath fitting, but from the knee down the skirt flares stylishly and falls in graceful folds toward the back. The single box pleat is applied narrow at the waist line but flares toward the bottom, where it trains slightly. The close adjustment at the upper portion of this skirt gives much the same effect as the habit skirts, which have been and are still very popular. The closing is effected invisibly at the left side under the pleat and a pocket may be conveniently inserted at the opposite side.

Although designed especially for plaid and for double faced materials, this model would be appropriate for cheviot, camel's hair, homespun, venetians or any of the new novelty cloths. The skirt is lined throughout with fine percale and finished around the lower edge with Donna skirt facing, which comes in all colors and is shaped to fit. To make this skirt in the medium size will require 3/4 yards of material 34 inches wide.

MAY MANTON.

Furs and No Furs.

Women who wear furs should be specially particular as to their methods of dispensing with them for certain costumes. It almost invariably invites a cold, unless some precaution is taken, and even then there is considerable risk for women who are not strong, says the Criterion. A year or two ago, when the hideous little mink collars were worn with claws, head and tail in evidence, physicians declared that diphtheria, sore throats and pleurisy flourished as never before. Most women insist on dressing inadequately for cold weather, for the reason that heavy clothing is not pretty as a rule. For this reason colds begin to attack femininity about this time of year and remain until the winter is ended. My lady goes about daintily through the cold months, proudly conscious that although wintry winds blow cold, her ingenious garmenting expresses summer's airiest frivolity. Any number of women wear low shoes and silk hosiery throughout the winter without the protection of a cloth gaiter.

Boots and Shoes.

A word as to the care of boots. We are just now buying new ones and putting by those we wore in the summer and early autumn. It is well, if we can, to get boots two months before one wants them, so that the leather may be seasoned, to rub them all over, soles with vaseline, and then put them by until needed. Boot trees, made specially by the maker of whom we buy our boots, and not bought promiscuously, are a necessity. Banana and orange juice are capital polishers, and so is a mixture of cream and blue-black ink, in equal quantities. Patent leather cleans well with cream and new milk. Finally, never dry wet boots by the fire, but put them where the wind may blow upon them.

Care of Veils.

The beauty and freshness of a veil can be preserved for a long time if it is properly cared for. After wearing it should be smoothed out carefully and rolled between paper or over a rod. A piece of broomstick makes an excellent roller. A veil which has become limp can be restored by dipping it in weak gum water and pulling it straight before it dries.

THE GOOD COUNTESS

CAREER OF A NOBLE GERMAN WOMAN.

She Carca for the Body as Well as the Soul of Those Who Need—Sketch of Her Life and Her Noble Work All Over the World.

Think of a noble woman, born in a castle, who basks in the sunshine of royal courts, who is smiled upon by haughty Emperors and fawned upon by time-serving courtiers. Imagine her forsaking all these, bidding farewell to her life of luxury and all the pleasures which come with such a position, facing the world, almost alone, that she may carry comfort to the lowly, cheer to the hungry and the Word of God to the unregenerate.

All this, and more, has come to pass in the career of Adeline, the Countess Schimmelmann, of Denmark. For years this gentlewoman has sailed from place to place, her purse and her kindly words ever ready to make easy the thorny path of the unfortunate. No sect nor nation may claim her; whether in the Baltic Sea or on the Great Lakes among those of her nationality or not, her kindly heart overflows with sympathy; she cares for the body as well that the Empress frowned on the deck of her yacht before an exhortation to righteousness.

Ostracism confronted her when she first took up this work; not for a minute did this deter her. After some years she was kidnapped by her own brother, who could not believe his sister was in her right mind when she mingled with the drunkard, the ne'er-do-well, the Goddess. He had her locked up in an insane asylum; there she remained for months until her friends obtained her release. Undeterred, she entered into her work with redoubled vigor; she extended her field; in 1898 she came to this country.

"I was born in the Castle of Ahrensburg, in Holstein, on July 19, 1854," she says. "My father was a Danish Count and peer of the realm. My mother was German. My father was international in his ideas of education. We had French and English, as well as Danish and German, governesses, and I became proficient in all these languages.

When I was young I was taken to visit at the German court. Empress Augusta took a deep interest in me and asked me to spend several months with her. From that day I divided my time between the Imperial Palace of Germany and my Danish home. I became the pet of the Empress, her first maid of honor. This gave me privileges none of the other women of the court were allowed to enjoy; I could go and come at my own pleasure. For eighteen years I was at the court, participating in all its brilliant functions. I remember distinctly when Gen. Grant and Mrs. Grant were there that I had a long conversation with the General in the palace.

At the German court the Countess was imbued with those ideas which led her to conquer the world and its pleasures. She never was of the gay set; she does not tell it, but it is related that the Empress frowned on excessive gaiety.

A genial, sweet-tempered woman is the Countess. She does not look her 45 years; there is not a gray strand in her brown hair; her eyes of blue are kindly and bright; her complexion as young as it was three decades ago. As gentle mannered as may be, there is a quiet dignity in her carriage and actions. Her English is all the more delightful because of a decided accent, but she is a fluent, animated talker. There is no home to which she prefers her yacht, which, by the way, is a schooner rigged and of fifty-three tons register.

Of her work the Countess said: "I visited fifty-eight cities last year. My plan is to enter a harbor and let the sailors and harbormen know of our presence, have them curious about our yacht and about myself. I then go ashore and if I can rent a hall I speak to the sailors. I try to induce them to give up drinking; the better to do this I establish coffee houses, if possible. I am never patronizing, and the fact that I have left my life of ease behind me and am spending my fortune to advance the cause has much to do, I feel, with winning some of the most hardened ones over to righteousness.

"I have gone from city to city, hoping my example would lead other women to do likewise. I never take up collections at my meetings. I have had contributions from the Queen of Denmark, who died recently, and also from the Princess of Wales."

Asked as to her observations in different cities and in this country, as "appealed to the Old World, the Countess replied:

"There is no city so bad as Berlin for drunkenness. Hamburg and all the German towns are most intemperate in the matter of drink. My work in Germany is hard, where even the Christians condemn and ridicule me for advocating temperance. The poverty and intemperance are vastly greater in Old World cities than in America, for here the women are actively engaged in good work. They have told me here in America that some of your cities are wicked. But they cannot exceed the vice and misery of the cities on the other side, and I know, for I have labored in their prisons and slums."

OWNED BY UNCLE SAM

It is Called Thorite, and by Its Use the Heaviest of High-Power Guns Can at Last Be Fired With Safety—A War Terror.

The War Department's adoption of thorite in the military event of the year. Uncle Sam will see to it that no foreign power learns a jot as to its secret manufacture. Its mysteries have been confined to only a handful of high military officers pledged to solemn secrecy.

Thorite has solved vexed problems that have racked the brains of most skillful ordnance experts for five years or more. Uncle Sam during this time has scoured the earth for a man able to furnish him a highly explosive shell capable of accomplishing two things:

Issuing from a high power gun without danger of explosion from the shock in the barrel of the weapon.

Striking its mark without exploding from the force of impact, but at any desired time after impact.

Dr. Hiram P. Tuttle, a wizard from Tacoma, Wash., journeyed to the national capital last summer, and made the proposition to the Army's Board of Ordnance and Fortifications that he prove his ability to furnish the desired article. Shortly afterward Gen. Miles issued an order enforcing an old rule barring admittance to government tests. A few weeks later the wizard of the West did wondrous things at Sandy Hook. The official adoption of thorite is the result.

That thorite could be fired with perfect safety and without possible danger to gun or gunner was readily demonstrated by numerous tests. It was fired from guns of various sizes by both black and smokeless powder. That intense heat brought in direct contact with it could not affect it in any way was proved by the inventor in a striking test. He heated a powder hot and thrust it into a 2-pound gun of the explosive without any perceptible result.

Other tests demonstrated that not even the pressure of the heaviest siege guns—40,000 pounds to the square inch—could effect it. A 12-inch service shell with thirty-nine pounds of thorite was fired from a huge seacoast rifle. No fuse was fixed. The explosive shell withstood the enormous pressure caused by the explosion of 450 pounds of brown powder at its base and went out to sea without uttering a sound or suffering destruction.

That this new element of warfare would not explode from the shock of impact, but would keep its harvest of death at any moment desired by the gunner, was proved in a more fascinating series of secret tests. Ten-inch shells filled with it were fired without fuses, and were fired through huge pieces of Harveyized steel armor plate. Regardless of the terrific shock and tremendous friction these shells did not explode.

In another trial an iron shell of 132 pounds weight and seven and one-half inches in diameter was fired from the new explosive and placed inside a concrete enclosure strongly built of steel. A connection was made by wire between the shell and an electric circuit. The purpose of the steel enclosure was to collect the flying pieces of the shell—in other words, to test its "fragmenting power." An electric button was touched, and after the explosion several men were delegated to gather up the scraps of iron within the enclosure. They counted 20,000 visible fragments.

To determine the destructive power, shells which had been fired from a 2 1/2-inch Sims-Dudley gun down the beach at Sandy Hook. Great "craters" left in the sand were sufficient proof that thorite as a powerful as the strongest blasting gelatine.

Thorite shells, it was proven, cannot explode save by aid of a certain time fuse or detonator devised by the inventor. In other words, it can be hammered and battered around during transportation and subjected to various temperatures loaded in either cans or shells. No accident can occur unless the detonator is attached and set. The new explosive, furthermore, needs no particular mass of shell, but can be put in any. Another advantage is that it never does not weaken during long storage.

The Ordnance Department has already shipped to Dr. Tuttle sufficient raw material to manufacture several thousand pounds of the explosive within the next two months. The finished product will be placed in shells of 3 1/2-inch calibre for light artillery guns, to be sent to the Philippines.

The War Department has just purchased a dozen Maxim mountain guns, of the same type as used by the British in their Khartoum, Omdurman and Transvaal campaigns. These will soon arrive in Manila, and shells for them will also be supplied although the department has ordered 8,000 rounds of ammunition such as used with them in Europe. These new guns, all throwing thorite shells, will dislodge the rebels from their ambush shelters in swamps and canebrakes.

Thorite will be adopted for our great coast defence howitzers, as soon as they are completed. Large shells will be manufactured to fit them. After the army shall have successfully used the invention, the navy will adopt it. By its means each fighting ship can create greater havoc than did the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius in the Spanish war.

The adoption of thorite puts the United States upon an equality with France and England in respect to high explosives. It has been the boast of these two nations that they excel in ability to safely fire highly combustible shells with gunpowder. Lyddite, the English, and mellinite, the French, explosive are practically the same.

"Do you admire Beethoven's music?" asked the young man whose hair is long and curls at the end.

"Oh, yes," answered the young woman. "Beethoven was all right for his day. You see rag time hadn't been invented then."—Washington Star.

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Portsmouth People Are Requested to Answer This.

Are not statements from representative citizens of Portsmouth more convincing than the doubtful utterances of people living everywhere else in the Union? Read this:

Mr. A. P. Blake, of 23 High street, says:—"I had a distressing pain in my back, dizziness and headache and an annoying urinary difficulty. I went to the Philbrick pharmacy and got Doan's Kidney Pills for it and they gave me great relief. I had an accident which injured my spine, and my physician told me it is incurable, consequently I cannot hope for a permanent cure, but I will say this, by taking half a box of Doan's Kidney Pills I was relieved of my backache and the urinary difficulty. I gave the balance of the box to my son, who was troubled with kidney complaint also. They did him so much good that he went and got more, and they cured him."

WHY SHE SANG.

How She Escaped a Punishment for Drunkenness.

A funny old Irish woman by her presence of mind and the natural gifts of her race got off without a penalty from the Southwark magistrate. She courted deeply to His Worship as she entered the dock, charged with being intoxicated. For answer she said: "Sure, Your Worship, I couldn't help it. I had a little drop, and, begorra, was singing: "While English and Irish fall fighting together, Their blood gets mixed up in one red red stream, ohone!" There is hope for this country when English and Irish are fighting together away from their home."

"Sure, how could I help singing that? You can't prevent the Irish singing!" She then said she would give much like to be sworn and give evidence as she would rather "kiss the Book than the blarneystone." Paul Taylor, however, told her he would not put her to the test, but under the circumstances would discharge her. The old lady clapped her hands in delight, wished the magistrate good luck, and commenced crooning: "The English and Irish fall fighting together," but she was hurried from the court before she could complete the quatrain.—London Telegraph.

"I feel that I ought to make some acknowledgment to the people who were so kind to us during my late wife's last sickness," said Mr. Phroogle, "and I would like to have you insert this card of thanks in a prominent place in this week's paper."

"We are obliged to make a charge for these notices," replied the editor of the Weekly Buzzard, looking over the manuscript, "and this will cost you $1."

"Then you needn't publish it," rejoined Mr. Phroogle. "I am not quite as grateful as all that comes to."—Chicago Tribune.

CAVITE, P. I., Sunday, Oct. 22, 1899.

Editor of Herald.—The insurgents are uneasy all along the line, and hardly a day passes but what they make a break, shooting the men on the picket line, or attacking little squads of our soldiers as the occasion offers. They certainly seem disposed to bring things to a climax shortly. The Americans will drive them out of their intrenchments, burn the nipah huts and march on to other conquests, when the enemy in smaller and unorganized forces will return. In talking with all classes, officers, soldiers and citizens, as many different opinions are expressed as there are people who talk. Some think that by January Aguinaldo will be a prisoner, and the war closed, while others, equally positive, that until Americans have a soldier stand on every square foot of the island with his loaded rifle, will the end come. On the island of Luzon, the half caste is the aristocracy, a cross between Chinese and Filipino, and they have wealth and are behind "Aggie" to considerable extent in financial resources. I saw two of these young bloods ride up to the Manila post office a few days ago, and the driver going a little by the main entrance, one of them struck him a fearful blow on the side of his face from his seat in the rear. The Filipino driver never turned to protest. The advent of the American soldier in Manila has made business on the ruse. The boys are good spenders, and with prices in Mexican money, they are apt to be extravagant. Nearly every one if not all the Filipinos are insurgents, if not open, secretly, and whether they work in the naval station at Cavite, or are business men in Manila, their mile must go to the cause, and in the language of the provost marshal to me an hour ago.

"How can we help it?" The profits of the Sunday cock fight or a portion of it follows in the same channel. The insurgent mode of warfare is picking our boys off one or two at a time, and it counts a total. Only a week ago within three miles of Manila, a captain and private of our troops were gobbled up as prisoners, and yet thousands of our men make up that city.

The writer was pleasantly interrupted today by a visit from a fellow traveler on the Gaelic, Mr. Bagnell of Yokohama, and an English officer. We took a walk out through San Roque, then through the navy yard, stopping en route home to let them look in on the cock fight and a baseball game between the ball teams of the U. S. S. Princeton and the marines. It's rather a strange contrast to the puritan idea of home, but "When in Rome, do as the Romans do." In going to the elms to bid them good bye, the church bell was calling the people to evening service, and workmen were whitewashing the belfry. The flagship Baltimore which has been lying at its mooring off Cavite, goes over to Manila harbor the coming week.

One of the smallest Spanish gunboats that lies near the bank wall on the river front just in view of my room, was in the list of suicides that ran ashore when Dewey's guns sunk the others, and it has quite an incident connected with it. One of the Spanish officers in command of it, swam ashore and ran frightened into a room in a house near by. The insurgents found him, and after he had made away with several of them, he was killed, disemboweled and beheaded.

The naval clerks in the mess next door to me lost their cook yesterday. Two women went in to get the laundry, and in trying to show the women an American double-barrelled gun, it went off, as usual, killed one of the women instantly, and injured the other so that one of her arms was amputated, and she has since died. He is in the charge of the marines, and instead of telling the truth about the affair, he lied, and the serious charge of murder is against him. When I first came here I was interested in one of the Filipino servants at the house because he had been an insurgent, and a Yankee bullet had made a little groove across his back. He told me "Insurgents no good." I had been come tired of brushing the mould from a pair of grey pants I had, as so he needed clothes I gave them to him, and the present pleased him so that he brushed up, and that same night made for the insurgents' lines across the bay. That at a month ago. Last evening, while sitting with two or three of the marines near the barracks, I saw a Filipino come in under guard, and looking into his face under the light, I saw my old friend "Sylvester." He was caught smuggling rice across the bay, and he will have to be under lock and key for a few days. This morning I saw my old pants lying on a bunk in the guard house. The woman of the house where I stop says, "I supposed those pants would have made him a major general in Aggie's army." TRASK.

OPIUM SMOKERS IN CHINA.

In Formosa One Person in Fifteen Uses the Drug.

To learn the actual number of opium smokers is impossible, but we know the amount of the foreign import of this drug, and the native confessions of reformed opium smokers tell us precisely the amount of opium required to pass the yin, or craving. It is one-fifth of an ounce daily. An ounce or liang is consumed in five days and a catty suffices for eighty days. Four catties are enough for 320 days, and another half catty will carry the user to the end of a year with comfort. A picul is enough then for only twenty-two persons and 50,000 piculs is sufficient for not more than 1,100,000 persons. The law of compulsion in the smoker is just as imperative for native opium as for foreign. It is a matter of great interest to know the extent of the evil.

In regard to Szechuen, that very populous and wealthy province, Mr. Schjoth, in the Trade Report for 1898, informs us that Szechuen produces 100,000 piculs of opium, and the cultivation is always increasing. Changchung, where he is commissioner, he is told that 30,000 piculs suffice for consumption in the province and that 65,000 piculs are exported. We may conclude that the smokers of that province cannot be less than 660,000. Since the population is 7,000,000, the number of smokers is one in a hundred. In Shensi one in 140 smokers, in Formosa one in fifteen is the proportion in cities, where the people are sunk to the lowest point of degradation and this is the largest proportion yet known of opium smokers as compared with the general population.—Shanghai Mercury.

How Much Sleep.

The statistics and diagrams of sleep in the Sunday Post-Dispatch are interesting as showing the influence of occupation upon habit. The American naval officer gets less sleep on the average than anyone else. It is with him a matter of regulation, but he gets used to his scant allowance and seems to thrive under it. He sleeps six hours in the twenty-four. The actor sleeps ten, while the army officer is allowed eight hours. There are two extreme opinions on the subject of sleep. One that men do not sleep enough, and the other that they sleep too much. Probably the truth is that a tranquil and evenly balanced mind not given to worry, dissipation or needless excitement needs less sleep than the fussy man who indulges in these respectable and unrespectable vices. It is possible to rest even when in the midst of work. But it requires much toil and self-control to achieve such a power of rest.

Municipal Novelty.

There is a decidedly humorous side which occasionally comes to light in connection with the undertakings of municipal corporations but the action of the enterprising city fathers of a small Hungarian town is certainly unique. The Mayor and the whole Town Council, consisting of eight members, formed themselves into a band of forgers and carried on a thriving business in the Town Hall manufacturing paper notes current in Austria, which they circulated pretty extensively. A workshop, well fitted with the necessary implements, was fixed up a cellar of the Town Hall, and they actually set policemen to guard the door while they were at work. This remarkable state of affairs existed for a couple of years, when the business was detected, the Mayor and councillors fighting like professional brigands upon being arrested.—Cin. Enquirer.

EARTHQUAKE IN CALIFORNIA.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Dec. 25.—About 1:25 o'clock this morning, a heavy earthquake shock was felt throughout the largest portion of southern California. It lasted twelve seconds. Its center seemed to be at San Jacinto, where fifteen villas were damaged. In this city and Hemet, the damage wrought is computed at $50,000. So far as can be learned, nobody was injured by the shock in any of the districts affected. Here in Los Angeles, the disturbance was particularly severe. The houses are all filled with eastern tourists, many of whom were badly frightened. At Santiago, the shock was accompanied by a loud rumbling noise and was followed by a high wave on the beach and along the water front.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—Up to a late hour tonight, nothing had been heard from South Africa to indicate any change in the military situation there. Word was received, dated Dec. 19th, that Gen. This was done probably to prevent the Boers from crossing and is taken to indicate that Buller does not intend to push forward for some time. prediction this time will come true. The difference of opinion between Senator Chandler and Admiral Crowninshield has caused much interest in this section and there is a lot of speculation as to which of the two will win out. The Reina Mercedes is a steel cruiser of good proportions, and her coming to this yard would mean a large amount of additional work for the men there.

Portsmouth	12,500	81

"I had a running, itching sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's Ointment took away the burning and itching instantly, and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lehart, Bowling Green, O.

tion from the pens of the most noted authors.

Some of this matter is supplied by societies for such purposes, some by friends and by those of the summer visitors who visit the island every season and in their generosity do all that they can to make life on such dreary spots as pleasant as possible. The island dwellers also receive a great number of the daily newspapers, so that they may, isolated from the world as they are, keep well informed on all current events and become really familiar with the best productions of the leading thinkers and writers of our times. In addition to the sources already mentioned, the government furnishes a circulating library of excellent works.

The recipients of these favors are not selfish and it is the custom for the crews of coasters and fishing vessels to call often at the island and to leave with well-filled boxes and bags of books and magazines. Often the keeper shares books and magazines that he has not read and the place is a center of distribution for many a longshoreman. It is a splendid idea and ought to be encouraged. Many of the practical religious societies have taken this method to reach the men who follow the sea and the results ought to be far reaching.

There seems to be as much discussion around the city over the merits of the British-Boer war as there was over the questions involved in the American-Spanish war. The only difference is that the British have but very little sympathy and the reports of the victories of the Boers have been received here with considerable satisfaction. We would not be true to conclusions from the study of the history of our country if we did not feel pleased when the redcoats met with similar repulses that they received during the struggle of the patriots for liberty.

The wood choppers around York and Kittery Point are anxiously awaiting a fall of snow in order to haul out their cords of fuel for the market. The choppers say that the winter will be a very mild one, if the usual indications of the sap amount to anything, for they say that the sap flows as freely as in the spring. It is also necessary that the swamps should freeze solid before any logging can be done.

Strong Bones

In speaking about Scott's Emulsion for children, you should not forget that it contains lime and soda, just what the child must have to form strong bones and good teeth. It's this forming time you want to look after.

Growing bodies must have an easily digested fat. Just think how much of it there is in milk, as cream.

Scott's Emulsion

is even more easily digested than cream. It's surprising how children thrive when given it.

Don't keep the children living on the edge of sickness all the time. Make them strong and rugged, plump and hearty. Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will do this for them.

At all drug stores, and at Scott's Emulsion Co., New York.

The Company's properties consist of several thousand acres of TESTED OIL PROPERTY in Ohio and West Virginia, having a monthly production of nearly 10,000 barrels. It is now negotiating for a number of oil wells, which when secured will give them a Monthly Yield of about 30,000 Barrels;

COPY OF BUCKEYE PIPE LINE COMPANY'S STATEMENT.

CLEVELAND, August 23rd, 1899.

CHARLES A. POST, Treasurer, etc.
DEAR SIR—Confirming my telegram of this A. M., I beg to say that your Company had run for its credit during April 5,142.64 barrels, May 5,529.36 barrels, June 5,065.13 barrels, July 5,049.46 barrels. There appears to be one run made in July not credited to your account until August, owing to absence of Division order. Therefore, if you desire to be more accurate you should add 146.93 to the amount of that run to the credit during July, making the total for the month 5,196.39 barrels.

Yours truly, R. L. BATES, Agent.

The above statement refers only to our Ohio field, the balance of the pipeline certificates can be seen at the Company's office, showing the West Virginia returns. The total average of oil territory under negotiations aggregates 25,000 acres of land distributed throughout the well known "oil producing fields" of Ohio and West Virginia.

Net Earnings, $225,000 Per Annum.

With the price of oil increasing almost daily the net earnings of the Company during the next year, should not fall short of $225,000.

For the rapid development of the Company's property, the officers have decided to sell Fifty Thousand (50,000) Shares of the Treasury Stock at par, $5.00, after which the price will be advanced without notice.

REGARDING EXTENSION OF

President Lovell of the Exeter and Amesbury railroad was in town on pushed for the early completion of the line.

CHRISTMAS AT LOCAL INSTI-TUTIONS.

Cottage Hospital.

The patients at the hospital had just as pleasant a Christmas as could be given them under the circumstances. Local philanthropists never slight this institution and they left many gratifying remembrances with the matron this year as usual. The diet conformed as closely to the holiday as was permissible according to the hospital regulations.

The Jail.

At the jail Deputy Sheriff Prime sought to make the inmates forget their unfortunate situation, and good Christmas was lowly served to everybody.
Those local angels of mercy who go about doing good did not forget to include the jail in their rounds of calls.

Home for Aged Women.

The Home for Aged Women fared extremely well this year. The larder was filled to overflowing with all the nice things to eat that Christmas stands for.
The happy occasion was a forceful reminder that the charitable hearts and hands of Portsmouth do not propose that this institution shall be neglected, either on holidays or at any other time,
so far as the necessities of life are concerned.

Children's Home.

The little ones at the Children's Home had a merry Christmas that they will remember for some time. Santa Claus was very generous in the multitude of gifts which he dumped from his capacious sacks, after he had slid down the chimney of the Home. Each child shared to a jolly degree in the dispensation of the whole-souled old chap.

City Farm.

Superintendent Shannon of the city farm did his best to give the day an appropriate celebration at the institution over which he has charge, and he succeeded fully. The inmates had as palatable a dinner as could be set before them, and plenty of appetizing dishes were left for supper. The inmates of the old brick building passed an enjoyable day in every way.

MRS. BARRETT DISCHARGED.

Not Guilty of Furnishing Boys With Liquor as Charged.

Associate Justice E. H. Adams held a session of police court at headquarters this morning, when a stranger from Boston was arraigned on a complaint of drunkenness on Water street Christmas afternoon. He pleaded not guilty.

Officer Hilton, who made the arrest, testified that the man was making a disturbance in the street and was resisting the attempts of his brother to take him out of the way. He used the most abusive language on the way to the station and fought and kicked. Officer Shannon testified that the man was crazy drunk.

He was ordered to pay a fine of $3
and costs taxed at $6.90.

The court then adjourned to the home of Mrs. John Barrett an invalid, on Green street, the place being familiarly known as the Toboggan slide, to hear the cases against her on complaints of selling spirituous liquor to three small boys on Sunday. She pleaded not guilty. There was no direct evidence against the woman and she was discharged. There were three complaints against her.

RAID AT RYE.

The Jim Blaine House Visited by the Authorities of the Town.

The Jim Blaine house at Rye was visited by the authorities of that town last evening with a search warrant and it is reported that a bottle of lager beer was secured as evidence to produce before the town police court.

If the report be correct, the consequences of the visit are liable to be severe to the owner of the place, as there is an injunction against the sale of liquor there, which was recently issued by the supreme court.

BURGLARY AT HEDDING.

The police were notified Christmas by telephone that the railroad station at Hedding on the Concord road, had been broken into on Saturday or Sunday. The thief got a half dozen Rogers Brothers' knives and forks, some revenue stamps and a small amount of silver coin.

STILL ALARM.

The chemical apparatus responded to a still alarm at 2.15 this afternoon for a chimney fire in the building numbered 51 Water street. The fire had been in progress for nearly an hour before the chemical was called to the scene. The blaze was extinguished without damage to the building.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

farce comedies on the road this season,
and it is doing a tremendous business
in the east.

All of A. Q. Scammon's attractions

will be put on the road and presented by one of the strongest companies ever seen in farce comedy.

It is a peculiar coincidence that most of the productions that have been sever-ly criticised by Alan Dale have been remarkably successful, while those that he did say a kind word for have proven dismal failures. It is only a question of time when the public will lose confidence in a critic that tries to be above all others.

POLICE COURT.

Judge Adams Presides at a Session
Christmas on Several Cases.

There was a session of police court on Christmas day, at which Associate Justice Adams presided. At ten o'clock there were three cases for him to dispose of. The first was that of Thomas McKenzie of Boston, one of the crew of the barge Eliot, who was charged with being drunk on Congress street Saturday evening. He pleaded guilty and was of the disposition to disclose where he procured his liquor, but afterward stated that he was not certain and was brought out for sentence. He received a fine of $3 and costs amounting to $6.90.

John Morton and Elizabeth McComber were then arraigned jointly for immoral conduct on Water street on Friday night. Both pleaded not guilty.
The witnesses for the prosecution were Marshal Entwistle, Assistant Marshal
West and Officers Hilton and Shannon, while the defendants introduced no evidence except their own stories. After the case had been closed the two withdrew their pleas and entered pleas of guilty, giving the court the jurisdiction of passing sentence. The man was fined $20 and costs tax d at $7.67 and the woman was sent to jail for a term of three months, with similar costs. The man will probably have to work the fine out at the same institution.

CHRISTMAS TREES.

The Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal church had their Christmas exercises and tree in their church on State street Monday evening. The church was crowded to the doors by relatives and friends of the little ones belonging to the school, and they were fully repaid for attending by watching their enjoyment.

Two large trees, gayly decorated, held the gifts, and they were loaded down with presents of every description. The exercises preceding the presentation of the gifts were very interesting, and in-

THE HERALD REMEMBERED.

The Herald received on Monday morning a box of the famous Manila cigars from our old friend Ex-Labor Commissioner Julian F. Frank, now on duty at Cavite. The arrival of the package here on Christmas morning showed that "Jule" figured correctly and the box was received in perfect condition. Whatever else is charged against the Philippines it cannot be said that they are not a judge of good cigars. The cigars are put up in such elegant taste that they are more suitable as souvenirs.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF
"CUCKOO."

The Cuckoo, the title of the new comedy-farce which will be presented at Music hall on Wednesday night, by a company of Charles Frohman's comedians, has aroused much curiosity and interest. Though it is now generally known that the new play is an adaptation from the French by Charles Brookfield, its peculiar significance as applied to the play has not yet been made known.
There have been frequent inquiries at the box office, but thus far no precise elucidation has been obtained. The manager, when questioned in regard to it, said: "I really don't know much more about it than you do. However, I have an idea that as the hero of the play is a handsome, heart-breaking fellow who performs brave deeds, the import of the title refers to him with something of the meaning which we apply in this country to anyone who performs uncommon deeds. You know that it is not an uncommon thing for Americans to refer to Dewey, Miles, Schley, Roosevelt, and Hobson as a

cuckoo."

It's the little colds that grow into big colds; the big colds that end in consumption and death. Watch the little colds. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine
